U. S. Readies Plan For German Arms

WASHINGTON (AP)—U. S. military and diplomatic officials are quietly working on alternative European defense plans for possible use if next week's London conference fails to produce an acceptable German rearmament program.

Some authorities estimated that almost as much time has been spent on possible lines of action for the United States in the absence of French agreement to some German arms plan as that devoted to preparations for American participation in the nine-power London meeting.

One reason, informants said, is that State Department officials do not want to get caught again without substitute plans, as they were when the French Assembly shelved the European Defense Community.

Work to date has produced a great variety of policy papers which informants said fall into three broad categories:

1. Peripheral defense — This would mean basing U. S. plans for resistance to any Communist aggression on positions in Britain, Spain, Italy and the Middle East.

2. IT WOULD HAVE grave political consequences because it would be interpreted by many Western European peoples as a U. S. abandonment of them. Both President Eisenhower and Secretary of State Dulles are understood to be fundamentally opposed to this concept, yet it is described as having adherents, particularly in the military, if it proved impossible to re-arm West Germany.

3. Direct rearmament of Germany — Under this formula the United States and Britain would go ahead, despite German unwillingness, to form German military forces after giving the West German government sovereignty in their zones.

Some officials are convinced France would eventually have to follow suit in its zone. This would almost certainly involve a special treaty relationship among West Germany, Britain and the United States.

4. Interim German armament — The United States and Britain, with the cooperation or assent of France, if possible, would arm the West Germans, after granting sovereignty, but with a clear understanding that a political solution would still be worked out. In effect, the idea would be to say to the French: "We can't wait any longer to get German forces set up in the defense of Western Europe but we are willing to agree that limitations on the ultimate size and control of those forces and on arms production may still be established."

Dulles is scheduled to go to London this weekend to attend the conference which will bring together also the foreign ministers of France, West Germany, Britain, Canada, Italy, Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg.

Ike Defending Power Policies

Northwest Hearing President's Talks

MENARD, Ore. (AP)—President Eisenhower, welcomed rousing to the Pacific Northwest, today links his campaign for election of 1956 to the "spirited defense" of his administration on the hot public power issue.

The President, on a four-state flying tour of the Far West, scheduled a major address at ceremonies dedicating the $286 million McNary Dam on the Columbia River here.

Eisenhower left the summer White House in Denver yesterday afternoon and said in Missoula, Mont., last night that his administration's "basic policy" is that American citizens generally are better qualified to look after themselves "than is some bureaucrat in far-off Washington."

Indications in advance of his speech here today were that the President would strike pretty much the same theme in discussing the administration's controversial program for placing in local hands much of the responsibility for development of the Northwest's power resources.

AIDES SAID Eisenhower's address would amount to a spirited defense of the program.

Democrats have been sharply assailing the program as a step backward.

After his McNary speech the President was taking off immediately for Los Angeles, where tonight he addresses a big political rally in Hollywood Bowl. Tomorrow morning in Los Angeles he will speak informally at the annual convention of the American Federation of Labor.

In his Missoula speech Eisenhower continued to follow the pattern of restrained campaigning which he announced months ago he would stick to. He still refrained from plugging on the road for individual Republican candidates.

Effort Is Seen To Put Blame On Educators

National Colored Group Sets Up Strategy In Quiet, Orderly Campaign

HILLSBORO (AP)—Negro parents today took their children again to two predominantly white schools here and again were refused admission.

The parents and children quietly accepted the rebuff and returned home. But it was evident that the procedure would be repeated indefinitely.

About 20 youngsters, accompanied by their parents, attempted to enter classes at one school and a smaller group at a second school. They were told by white school administrators that they were at the "wrong school."

They were acting upon the advice of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Charles Francis of Dayton, public relations director of the NAACP said the parents thus would not be keeping the children out of school but that "the superintendent and the school board will be doing it."

FRANCIS MADE his suggestion at a meeting of Hillsboro's newly organized chapter of the NAACP last night.

The school board says it is listing as truant Negroes who do not attend classes at the school to which they are assigned.

The meeting followed filing of suit in the U. S. District Court in Cincinnati to prohibit the school board from enforcing a rezoning rule which would send most Negro pupils back to the Lincoln school which has been an all-Negro institution.

Negro youngsters had enrolled at the other schools at the start of this term following the recent Supreme Court ban of school segregation but then the board rezoned the city.

The suit claimed the rezoning amounted to segregation. In the past all Negro elementary pupils went to the Lincoln school. The other two schools were all white. Under the rezoning a few Negro pupils attend the former all-white schools.

U. S. District Court Judge John W. Druffel set next Wednesday as the date for a hearing on the suit. (Continued on Page Two)

Tiny Fingers Probe And Find Death

WAVERLY (AP)—Three-year-old Deborah Lee Conn yesterday poked her tiny fingers in a dresser drawer, as little tots will.

Her probing fingers pulled out a pistol. She turned it in her hands, examining the strange object. Then she looked into the barrel and somehow pulled the trigger.

Deborah slumped to the floor and died instantly. The .32 caliber pistol fell back into the drawer.

That's how police reconstructed the death of the tiny daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Emmitt Conn, who moved to the atomic energy plant area two years ago from Floyd County, Ky.

Rhodes Calls Off Press Conference

COLUMBUS (AP)—Declaring he did not want to engage in "name-calling" State Auditor James Rhodes today called off a scheduled press conference which was to have concerned his hot controversy with the Ohio Turnpike Commission.

Rhodes hard-campaigning Republican candidate for governor had been bitterly criticized by James Shocknessy commission chairman and Gov. Frank J. Lausche whom Rhodes seeks to unseat.

Referring to a controversial audit report issued by Rhodes Shocknessy labeled the report an example of "the big smear and the big lie" technique. And in a brief statement Lausche who is seeking re-election saw it as "an attempt without regard to facts to assassinate the reputation of an honest and able public official."

Rhodes called off his meeting with reporters who had planned to question him closely after he had asked Atty. Gen. C. William O'Neill for advice on how to begin "any criminal or civil actions which may be called for" by results of the audit.

THE REPORT claimed that Shocknessy, a Columbus attorney represents two insurance firms that wrote some $50 million worth of insurance for turnpike contractors.

Shocknessy flatly denied he represented either of the two insurance companies United States Fidelity and Guaranty Co. of Baltimore Md. or the Standard Accident Insurance Co. of Detroit.

Rhodes' report compiled under the direction of Donald Cook a former G-man said the Martin-Hubbell Law Directory listed the firm of Shocknessy Summers & Denton as counsel for both.

"An auditor worthy of the name would not have relied on secondary sources" Shocknessy said as he produced letters from both companies stating that neither he nor his associates represent them.

"The chairman of this commission does not represent any insurance or surety company that guarantees any bonds of performance by turnpike contractors" Shocknessy stated.

The report also cited what it termed "improper transactions of commission agents" in sales of land near the 241-mile Northern Ohio turnpike; criticized the commission for not setting up an annual budget for construction and operational expenses, and claimed that the commission pays the bills for Shocknessy's suite of rooms at the Columbus Athletic Club.

On the land transactions, Shocknessy said:

"We're going to write to everyone mentioned in the report to ask them to confirm or deny the statements."

Shocknessy and other commission members were appointed by Lausche who seeks a fifth term this fall.

Shocknessy called the report "the big lie of a public official who devoid in integrity himself would deny integrity to others."

Crime Rate Heads For All-Time High

WASHINGTON (AP)—FBI Chief J. Edgar Hoover says crime in America will reach a record high this year if the present rate keeps up.

Hoover reported that the national crime rate for the first half of 1954 climbed 8.5 per cent over last year's level during the same period.

In the semi-annual issue of the FBI's Uniform Crime Reports, compiled from police reports from across the nation, Hoover said 1,136,140 major crimes were committed in January-June of this year. That is 88,850 more than a year ago and figures out to a major crime every 13.8 seconds.

Delay Seen In Senate Recall To Study McCarthy Censure

WASHINGTON (AP)—Republican Leader Knowland of California advised senate officers today that it may be several days before a decision is reached on when the Senate will reconvene to consider proposed censure of Sen. McCarthy.

Mark Trice, secretary of the Senate, issued this statement:

"I have just talked over the telephone with Sen. William Knowland, majority leader, and he informs me that further consultations are necessary before a decision can be reached in regard to the reconvening of the Senate. Several days may be required before a decision is reached."

Trice had indicated earlier that he was expecting instructions momentarily from Knowland and Sen. Johnson of Texas, the Democratic leader, to issue a formal call for the Senate to convene.

Trice's announcement appeared to eliminate the possibility the Senate will be called back on Sept. 29, a date widely mentioned at the Capitol earlier. Senate leaders must give five days advance notice in calling a session.

The Senate, before recessing last month, authorized Knowland and Johnson to recall the Senate once the Watkins special committee was ready with its report on the charges filed against McCarthy.

THE CENSURE resolution, filed by Sen. Flanders (R-Vt.), accuses McCarthy of conduct tending to cast disrepute on the entire Senate. McCarthy declined to say what steps he will take to defend himself in the special session. Debate of at least a week appears likely.

A special committee created by the Senate to investigate the censure charges hopes to hand down on Monday a unanimous report to form the basis for the Senate's consideration.

Well-placed sources described its members as agreed in general on what the evidence showed in nine days of public hearings, but not yet fully agreed on how to phrase these views.

Chairman Watkins (R-Utah) called the group back into session today for another try. He said he was "still hoping" the report would be finished by the end of the week.

Butter Surplus Growing Smaller

NEW YORK (AP)—Secretary of Agriculture Ezra T. Benson says the government has stopped accumulating butter under the 75 per cent of parity support price for dairy products.

The government now is disposing of more butter than it buys under the support program, he said, and in August distributed 24 million pounds while buying only 17 million.

If dairy support prices had been raised to 80 per cent of parity the secretary said, it would have cost the government up to $150 million, reduced butter consumption and given "windfall profits" to butter in storage.

140 Acres And 47 Foot Depth Latest Estimate

Resources Director Hopes Survey End To Be Near Oct. 5

Lake Folly Memorial Lake — Hargus Creek Lake — whatever name it goes by, the long delayed project east of Circleville will soon be a reality.

"It now looks as if we can complete a lake with a depth of 47 feet at the dam, an average depth of 23 feet and a water area in excess of 140 acres," stated Ohio Department of Natural Resources Director A. W. Marion in a letter to The Herald Thursday.

When notified of Marion's remarks, Bob Wolfe, secretary of the Pickaway County Farmers and Sportsmen's Assn., replied that everyone should be satisfied at last.

"I really believe the project will definitely be completed this time," Wolfe asserted. His group had for a long time been fighting delays and proposed cuts in the size of the project from the originally planned 161 acres to as low as 50 acres.

MARION disclosed in his letter that "every effort was being made to complete the engineering survey by the first week in October." His letter reads as follows:

"This will acknowledge the receipt of your letter of September 15 in answer to questions you have raised regarding the progress on the Hargus Creek Lake in Pickaway County.

"We are making every effort to complete the engineering survey on the topographical information needed behind this dam by the first week in October, so that work can be pushed on the final plans to complete the dam at the earliest possible date.

"This morning I received the complete topo on the lands needed for the additional spillway for this project.

"Our land acquisition section is making every effort at the present time to acquire by negotiation, the necessary additional land needed for this project; if these negotiations are successful, then the project can be completed at an early date. If, however, it is necessary to condemn this land through the courts, no one can say definitely (Continued on Page Two)

Heroic Pilot Dies In Plane Mishap

SAN BERNARDINO, Calif. (AP)—Rescue operations were completed yesterday of eight airmen who bailed out of a burning car plane as the heroic pilot rode the plane to his death so his crew could escape. The pilot was Capt. C. M. Eckstein, 33, a former resident of Canton, Ohio.

The twin-engine C-82 crashed in the rugged San Bernardino Mountains Tuesday night shortly after refueling at Norton AFB. It came down 10 miles northwest of Big Bear Lake, exploding as it crashed and setting a forest fire that raged for hours. The eight men who bailed out were rescued by ground crews and helicopter.

Broken Axle Cited In Wreck

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—A broken axle is listed as the probable cause of the derailment yesterday of the Santa Fe Railroad's streamliner San Francisco Chief in which all 191 passengers escaped serious injury.

Between 20 and 30 persons aboard the Oakland, Calif.-to-Chicago train were shaken up but only two passengers and three crew members were hospitalized overnight. They were to be released today. The Santa Fe estimated damage at $250,000.

Ike's Ag Program Now Heading Away From Price Supports

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Eisenhower administration is heading federal farm aid programs toward more active salesmanship and cheaper production of crops and away from heavy dependence upon price support guarantees for farmers.

The first major step in this direction was taken last week when Secretary of Agriculture Benson, acting under a new flexible farm price support law, reduced the 1955 crop price floor for wheat from this year's farm average of $2.24 a bushel to $2.06.

Lower price guarantees for a number of other crops will be announced before 1955 planting time. But this reduction of federal aid in the farm price field does not mean the government is cutting down on its activity in behalf of agriculture.

Benson and his department aides are seeking to put more emphasis on selling of farm products and in showing farmers how to reduce production costs so that they can make money even with lower price supports.

Furthermore, other farm aid programs which have been less spectacular and less controversial than price supports will be continued and in some cases expanded.

Topping administration activities in the selling field is a new 700-million-dollar surplus disposal program being set up under an Agricultural Trade Development Act passed by the recent Congress.

This legislation directs the department to sell some of its surplus farm products—acquired under the spotlighted support program—to friendly countries which do not have American dollars to buy them with. The United States will accept foreign currencies and use this money to help finance its operations abroad.

A feature of this program is a requirement that sales be made to fill markets which otherwise would not go to this country or which would not replace normal U. S. SALES. The theory is that the sales will develop new markets which will become permanent.

Broadened sales, Benson says, would reduce the U. S. surplus problem and bring about an improvement in the general farm price and income picture without the necessity of heavy government spending and accumulation of surpluses.

Coupled with efforts to do a better job of selling will be increased emphasis upon department research and educational programs. The idea is that if the department can show farmers how to grow more on a given plot of land, production costs will be reduced and farmers won't need as high a price to make the same amount of money.

The department is seeking to develop improved varieties of commercial crops, to improve crop production practices including methods to control plant diseases, to control harmful and to utilize beneficial insects affecting farm production, and to develop new chemical fertilizers for control of crop pests.

It also seeks to develop improved fertilizers and soil management irrigation practices.

Likewise, investigations seek the development of superior strains and types of farm animals and poultry and better methods of controlling animal pests and diseases. In this connection, department experts stand guard at national borders to prevent the importation of diseased animals that could bring economic disaster to the livestock industry in this country. A case in point was the dread hoof-and-mouth disease among cattle in Mexico. Similarly, the various states have their own programs to keep out diseased animals and materials.

In the research field, the department operates four big regional laboratories in which research is carried on seeking new industrial uses for farm products.

The department maintains an extension service to carry the results of its research efforts to individual farmers. It operates on a cooperative basis with state land-grant colleges, counties and municipalities.

Under this service, the government maintains local staffs of county agricultural agents, home demonstration agents, county 4-H Club agents and other specialists charged with making available and interpreting the results of agricultural research.

Politicians List Ohio Among 6 Crucial States

Control Of Senate Is Big Aim Of Both Parties In Nation

WASHINGTON (AP) — Republican and Democratic campaign strategists apparently regarded six states as crucial battlegrounds in the struggle for control of the Senate in the 84th Congress.

A check of rival Senate campaign committees disclosed today a heavy concentration of effort in Delaware, Illinois and Ohio — where Republicans rate their chances of unseating Democratic senators best — and in Kentucky, New Jersey and Wyoming — where Democratic hopes of gaining Senate seats are highest.

Thirty-six Senate seats are at stake in the elections Nov. 2. Maine voters last week gave Sen. Margaret Chase Smith, a Republican, a second six-year term.

The present Senate lineup is 48 Republicans, 47 Democrats and Sen. Morse of Oregon, an independent.

A former Republican who bolted during the 1952 presidential election, Morse has announced he will vote with Democrats in organizing the Senate next January. He voted with the Republicans when the present Senate was organized nearly two years ago.

With the help of Morse, the Democrats could win control of the next Senate by picking up a net gain of one seat.

In addition to the six key states, the Republicans profess optimism about their chances of picking up seats in New Mexico, Iowa, Colorado and Montana while the Democrats voice high hopes of unseating Republicans in Massachusetts, Oregon and Idaho.

The Democratic candidate in Kentucky is Alben W. Barkley who served in the Senate for 22 years, part of the time as majority leader, before he resigned when elected vice-president in 1948. Democratic strategists concede Barkley faces a strong Republican vote-getter in Sen. John Sherman Cooper.

In New Jersey, Democrats are counting on a split in Republican ranks to put over their Senate candidate, Rep. Charles R. Howell. The Republican nominee, former Rep. Clifford P. Case is opposed by some GOP elements in the state.

Democratic veteran Joseph C. O'Mahoney is trying for a comeback in Wyoming. Defeated two years ago after 19 years in the Senate, O'Mahoney is opposed by Republican Rep. William H. Harrison.

Republicans say they are confident of unseating Democratic Sen. Allen Frear in Delaware. The Republican candidate is Rep. Herbert B. Warburton.

In Illinois, the Republican candidate for the seat now held by Democratic Sen. Paul Douglas is Joseph T. Meek, until his nomination head of the Illinois Federation of Retail Assns.

In Ohio, Republican Rep. George H. Bender is seeking to oust Democratic Sen. Thomas A. Burke, who was appointed to the Senate last year after the death of Sen. Robert A. Taft. They are competing for the right to serve out the last two years of Taft's six-year term.

Phosphorescent Sea Light Fascinating To Scientists

Editor's Note: Following is the fourth in a series of five articles telling of the unusual findings of scientists trying to find out what makes man tick.

By ALTON L. BLAKESLEE
Associated Press Science Reporter

WOODS HOLE, Mass. (AP) — The mystery light of the dark seas sprang into glowing bluish light as the scientist mixed two chemicals in a blackened room.

It shone brightly in the glass beaker, iridescent, lighting faintly a whole corner of the room.

This was exactly the light you see in sea water if you've ever swum at night or watched as a boat knifed through the water. It's the light like that — except for color — from yellow fireflies. Or from dead tree stumps glowing in the dark because of fungi growing on them.

It is bioluminescence, chemical and cold light which nature has granted to many living things, especially in the sea.

Man has been intrigued with this natural light from the time of his earliest observations and wonderings about his world. Now science is beginning to find the explanations, and perhaps some day some marvelous uses for it.

Mysteries of this cold light are being explored by Dr. E. Newton Harvey of Princeton University and associates who spend their summers here at the Marine Biological Laboratory working with deep-sea animals and organisms from the sea.

Two chemicals create the light — luciferin and luciferase, an enzyme or accelerator of chemical reactions. Both have been isolated in pure form from a tiny crab-like creature, cypridina, which is one of the main illuminators of the sea. Fireflies produce their light from the same two chemicals, but the luciferin of fireflies is probably ferent from that of these crustacea.

These sea animals, about the size of big bird seed, can be kept in the dried state, and will give off light when ground by mortar and pestle and mixed with water.

By careful chemical treatment, their luciferin can be extracted and also their luciferase. When these two liquids are mixed, you get the wondrous glow as though thousands of the animals at once were lighting the sea.

In life, these animals shoot their luminescence out into the water as a boat passes or the water is disturbed. Why they do it is a conundrum — perhaps to warn their fellows away.

Fireflies apparently use their flashing light to attract boy and girl fireflies together. Numerous little fish living in ocean depths carry headlamps and other lights. Perhaps, Dr. Harvey speculates, the position of the lights provide identification for romance in the blackness of the deep.

A relative of the jellyfish, mnemiopsis, the size of a silver dollar or larger, is another common lamp-lighter of the sea, glowing with a green hue. Why it has a light is hard to answer, Dr. Harvey says, for it has no known enemies, nor does it seek out prey itself.

Dr. Joseph J. Chang of Princeton University, originally from South Korea put a bit of this jelly-like creature in a darkened box, so electric shocks could stimulate its light-producing cells. The light was picked up by a photocell, amplified and turned into electric current, producing pips or bounces on a recording screen.

The light-giving reaction is like the twitch of a muscle, and like a muscle the light cells will grow tired and weak from repeated performance. Can this reaction of sea-light help tell science more about the workings of the human engine of muscle? That is one purpose of the studies.

If cold light could be made synthetically — and there is a good chance that luciferin might be duplicated — then man could solve the secret of another engine of life.

Our lamps are inefficient, producing heat as well as light. Does nature hold the secret for better or special lights by which to see? Would it just satisfy a challenge from nature to learn the answers to bioluminescence? Or could it lead to advantages and uses still unforeseeable?

Scientists working on this and a hundred other projects cannot foretell. They do know that facts learned from basic research such as this often supply the key or clue to someone working to develop something for peace, or medicine or human good.

Steubenville Vice Being Cleaned Up

COLUMBUS (AP) — A source close to Gov. Frank J. Lausche says "progress is being made" in cleaning up alleged houses of ill fame in Steubenville.

The source said that several weeks ago the state "called on public officials generally in Steubenville to eliminate existing vice conditions."

The same source said no state investigation is underway but that "contact is being kept with the problem." While "progress has been made," according to the source, "more will have to be done."

School Lunchroom Ruling Is Made

COLUMBUS (AP) — The attorney general has ruled school lunchroom receipts cannot be used for any other purpose. The ruling from Atty. Gen. C. William O'Neill said the school lunchroom law prohibits profits, but if there is a surplus it may not be used for other purposes.

The exception is in cases the board of education has advanced money from its general fund to establish lunchrooms. These advances may be repaid.

Narcotics Case Brings Pair Fines

MARION (AP) — A man and woman, charged with fraudulently obtaining narcotics, yesterday were fined and given suspended sentences by Common Pleas Judge Paul D. Smith.

Clarence Little, 49, and Mrs. Hazel Laney, 41, both of Fostoria, were arrested last August after illegally obtaining narcotics drugs from a Marion physician. The physician, whose name was not revealed, lost his federal narcotics license.

Little was fined $300 plus court cost, and Mrs. Laney was given a suspended fine of $100 plus costs. Both received suspended one-year sentences.

Segregation Case Set For Dec. 6

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court will hear further arguments Dec. 6 on how to carry out its decision against racial segregation in public schools.

The arguments could extend over several days. There will be an allowance of 10 hours for arguments from South Carolina, Virginia, Kansas, Delaware and the District of Columbia and the replies to those arguments.

Harold Willey, clerk of the high tribunal, said the justices had agreed that briefs of all interested states and the District of Columbia may be filed by Nov. 15.

BESIEGED ISLANDS

STRIFE BOILING UP around Quemoy Island and other Nationalist-held islands close to the red Chinese mainland can be construed as a deliberate effort on the part of the Chinese communists to undermine U. S. public opinion concerning the bigger prize of Formosa.

The small island outpost in Amoy Harbor just off the mainland has decided strategic and psychological value to both the reds and the Nationalists. To each side it's definitely worth fighting for.

But whether the U. S., committed to the defense of Formosa proper and key island chains nearby, will consider defense of Quemoy as included is not clear. The communists probably hope that the U. S. will regard Quemoy as not of sufficient importance for involvement.

If this should prove to be the case, the communists believe a stunning blow will have been dealt to Nationalist morale. They are probably convinced, too, that U. S. default in this one instance will soften the hitherto firm American resolve concerning Formosa itself.

Part of America's present predicament stems from a Washington policy announcement during the July, 1950, invasion threat to Formosa that the Navy would not shield Quemoy. With this to go on, the Chinese reds sent a cheap victory with far reaching dividends.

SPECIALISTS NEEDED

A PHASE OF "push-button" warfare lagging seriously behind technological advances is development of a corps of uniformed experts to push the right buttons, according to one of the nation's top psychologists dealing with military problems. He notes that nuclear weapons have magnified the potential destructiveness of modern arms that slight errors in human judgment can have disastrous effect.

When the nuclear breakthrough occurred, it became inevitable that weapon systems would advance more rapidly than man's skills to cope with them.

J. W. Dunlap, president of the military psychology division of the American Psychological Association, observes that "with all due respect to our present generation of officers, they do not have the technical training to make decisions in these areas with confidence. They are uneasy. They must depend on civilian technical advice and are unhappy in their dependence."

This creates the problem of building a dedicated, technically qualified officers' corps that can be on intimate terms with the new weapons in much the same way that officers have understood conventional arms of the past. The services will probably find it necessary to develop an entirely new set of appeals to attract such people and hold them to a lifetime career.

George E. Sokolsky's

These Days

New weapons always alter not only the nature of war but the immediate objectives of diplomacy. Historic areas rise or fall in importance as the weapons for conquest or defense find greater range. When only the enemy on the border was a peril to the maintenance of a state, that peril might be removed by a diplomatic marriage, by gifts amounting to bribes for peace, by paying tribute or by pushing the enemy away from the border. The dynastic wars of Europe, following upon the death of Charlemagne and continuing to Napoleon, were generally of such a nature.

What are the borders of a country — any country — since the atom and hydrogen bombs have come into existence? For instance, the little country, Great Britain, 94,278 square miles, a group of islands off the coast of northwestern Europe, no longer has a natural defense. (Oregon is about 96,000 square miles, for comparison.) That defense used to be the English Channel, which had been crossed by Viking, Anglo-Saxon, Roman, Dane, and Norman, but not by Napoleon or Hitler.

Nevertheless both the Kaiser and Hitler strafed England ferociously, using airplanes and high explosives. Today, civil life on those islands could be destroyed by nine or ten atom or hydrogen bombs hurled at London, Portsmouth, Liverpool, Birmingham, Hull, Glasgow, Manchester, Edinburgh.

And the job could probably be done in no time at all, either by Soviet Russia or the United States which are amply supplied with bombs for the purpose.

When a nation faces that reality, its diplomacy is modified to meet the situation. Granted the truth that every weapon of offense stimulates the development of counter-weapons of defense, the risk that Coventry could be repeated on so vast a scale that Great Britain might be reduced in a few hours forces upon those in charge of avoiding, for as long as possible, a war that could be fought in her skies.

To the practical official, it matters little who permitted such a situation to develop. He is not necessarily an historian and he cannot afford to concern himself too much with his own or other people's blunders. That, perhaps, is why Sir Winston Churchill can still sleep at night. The practical statesman deals with what faces him today. And today, Sir Winston Churchill and Anthony Eden are faced by possible or probable extinction, for their country, should war come.

Great Britain has for most of her history managed to fight her wars away from home. The past two wars were in her skies; the next war could destroy her. The British program is based on peace at almost any price.

Primarily the British are interested in trade, but their economic situation is not so bad. The so-called "Dollar Gap" has been closed. British trade is thriving and British wares are being sold even in this country which are not essentially export commodities, for instance, bottled waters of various kinds.

DIET AND HEALTH

Digestive Troubles From Roast Corn

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

"POPCORN proctitis" is medical terminology for the havoc caused in the intestine by the undigested morsels of roasted corn. The disturbance of the bowel leads to the distressing sight of blood either mixed in the bowel movement or in the toilet bowl following a child's visit to the toilet.

Rectal Bleeding

Of course there are other causes for rectal bleeding in a child. A polyp, which is a small tumor, may be the reason, or the bowel may telescope within itself. However, the most common cause is an inflammation of the lining membrane of the rectum, caused by small fissures or cuts in this area.

In many instances, questioning reveals that popcorn was an item of diet. Roasted corn, unless well chewed, will leave an undigested portion of the kernel that is sufficiently large and pointed to cut the bowel wall when it is embedded in an otherwise firm stool.

Medical Diagnosis

A doctor can usually diagnose this disorder by examining the rectum with an instrument known as a proctoscope. The little fissures will usually heal without treatment, provided rough and highly seasoned foods are eliminated from the diet for a week. The use of a bland anesthetic ointment is also of some help.

When this disorder occurs in adults, however, it may require surgery to bring about a cure.

QUESTION AND ANSWER

Mrs. J.: My child's navel swells out. He is five years old. What could be done for this?
Answer: This condition is what is known as a navel rupture, or hernia. Usually this is best remedied by surgery in a child this age.

CHAPTER FOURTEEN

WHEN Penn was gone Claudia felt sick and cold, her lovely Saturday ruined.

That boy! He was back from Korea, then. The unease that had dogged Claudia Mapes' footsteps for a long time and then been lifted for a year or two, returned. Even when he was very young the rury and hatred in the face of Marsh Nichols' son had been a little frightening.

What if she had told Penn the truth? About that factory building Josh Henning and some other men from home had been stuck with in Baltimore. About those promised priorities in copper and other metals that never materialized—but from no fault of Storey's, no fault at all, she argued to herself.

How could Elihu know the president would suddenly appoint a co-ordinator who would be hostile and suspicious? And the house was Maude's fault. Always nagging and napping because other senator's wives had big homes on the avenues while she was stuck in an unfashionable apartment.

Abruptly, like the onset of an illness, the awareness came to Claudia Mapes that she despised Maude Storey, hated and resented all the futile, foolish characters who sucked at the substance and the strength of Elihu Storey. Even that Houk girl. How had she dared come here, babbling all that nonsense about wanting to protect her uncle? Thinking, because of a man undoubtedly, that she could wheedle some revelation out of a confidential secretary!

It was all plain to Claudia. Penn had met that Nichols boy and listened to his lies. Bitterly Claudia blamed everyone but the senator. Maude, most of all. A woman who had turned her back on her beginning, who ignored ever her poor old parents, living out their last days in loneliness far away. And those sons of Elihu's, of whom he could not even be proud! Even Gil. What would Gil have been without his father's prestige behind him? Just one more insignificant two-striper lost in the vast impersonality of the Navy.

Now her Saturday was ruined. No matter what she had to fill the day, she was so upset and angry that it would fall apart, daily. There was only one thing she would really like to do and that was to seek out Marsh Nichols' son and challenge him to prove any accusation he might be making against the senator. She wouldn't do it, of course. She would damper her belligerent desire just as she had subdued the urge to smack necklers over the head with her briefcase time and time again.

She did not need to search for the paragraph intended for her eye. It jumped at her like something buried under ambush. The column bore the ambiguous title "They Say," and the item that froze her to rigidity began: "They say on the Hill that alert young Congressman Carrick, bird dog of the anti-red investigations as again. Just as she refrained from giving disgruntled constituents dirty looks or thumbing her ladylike nose at crude characters like Josh Henning.

Thinking of Henning brought anotherrown to her brow. What was Josh doing in Washington anyway? He'd been seen around town with that conceited young Carrick. Claudia hadn't liked the whispers that had seeped through the office building like poison gas these last few days. Nor had she been eased by Senator Storey's carefully assumed attitude of indifference, the worried frown she caught on his face when he didn't know she was watching.

It was no use trying to salvage this Saturday. She went back to her bedroom and dragged off her comfortable Saturday clothes, put on a white blouse, her smart gray suit, and her little string of synthetic pearls. She gave her nails a whisk with a file and pinned on a gray hat. With her bag and gloves she went down to the bus stop as she did every other morning. She would go back to the office and work. You could always drug uneasiness with work, with the familiarity of routine. After all, they were in for five more years and three months. Nobody, not even Josh Henning, could take that away from Elihu Storey.

The great building was silent, echoing, almost deserted. It was always that way on Saturdays. A little group of tourists wandered in the halls with a guide. An elderly man in uniform dozed beside the open door of an elevator. Claudia smiled at him as he stumbled up. They were old-timers, he and she.

She let herself into the office with her key. The air-conditioned room felt chilly, the air pungent with some kind of druggery disinfectant, the stuff the clean, young women put on their naps. Her desk shone, blank and empty, all but a space in the middle where a folded newspaper lay. She packed it up, puzzled. Somebody had put it there. Saturday's copy of the most unscrupulous paper in the city.

It was folded so that a column lay uppermost, that piece of daily lurid journalism that every member of Congress read anxiously and pretended to disdain.

You could always drug uneasiness with work, with the familiarity of routine. After all, they were in for five more years and three months. Nobody, not even Josh Henning, could take that away from Elihu Storey.

The great building was silent, echoing, almost deserted. It was always that way on Saturdays. A little group of tourists wandered in the halls with a guide. An elderly man in uniform dozed beside the open door of an elevator. Claudia smiled at him as he stumbled up. They were old-timers, he and she.

She let herself into the office with her key. The air-conditioned room felt chilly, the air pungent with some kind of druggery disinfectant, the stuff the clean, young women put on their naps. Her desk shone, blank and empty, all but a space in the middle where a folded newspaper lay. She packed it up, puzzled. Somebody had put it there. Saturday's copy of the most unscrupulous paper in the city.

It was folded so that a column lay uppermost, that piece of daily lurid journalism that every member of Congress read anxiously and pretended to disdain.

She did not need to search for the paragraph intended for her eye. It jumped at her like something buried under ambush. The column bore the ambiguous title "They Say," and the item that froze her to rigidity began: "They say on the Hill that alert young Congressman Carrick, bird dog of the anti-red investigations as again. Just as she refrained from giving disgruntled constituents dirty looks or thumbing her ladylike nose at crude characters like Josh Henning.

Thinking of Henning brought anotherrown to her brow. What was Josh doing in Washington anyway? He'd been seen around town with that conceited young Carrick. Claudia hadn't liked the whispers that had seeped through the office building like poison gas these last few days. Nor had she been eased by Senator Storey's carefully assumed attitude of indifference, the worried frown she caught on his face when he didn't know she was watching.

It was no use trying to salvage this Saturday. She went back to her bedroom and dragged off her comfortable Saturday clothes, put on a white blouse, her smart gray suit, and her little string of synthetic pearls. She gave her nails a whisk with a file and pinned on a gray hat. With her bag and gloves she went down to the bus stop as she did every other morning. She would go back to the office and work. You could always drug uneasiness with work, with the familiarity of routine. After all, they were in for five more years and three months. nosed out another of those stinking cells. High connections. They Say, even involves the artistic son of a man high in the Senate."

Claudia's teeth set so rapidly that her ears ached. She twisted the paper angrily in her hands, then unrolled it again, and red-pencilled the item. She started to clip it, then changed her mind and folded the whole page instead. With quick, nervous desperation she searched the telephone book. She dialled swiftly, was relieved when a feminine voice answered.

"Mrs. Storey?" Claudia inquired with forced calm. "Mrs. Rutherford Storey? This is Claudia Mapes, Kelly. Could you come downtown and have lunch with me today? There's something I'd like to talk over with you—something that concerns us—that would worry the senator. Could you come to the office if I wait for you here? Thank you. I'll expect you soon then."

She hung up. But half an hour passed before Claudia remembered to take off her hat.

Winifred Storey hated Saturdays.

The government departments closed and usually Gil was at home all morning, cluttering up the little apartment with his male concerns, making a nuisance of himself. If he wasn't in her kitchen, polishing his boots or his buttons and braid, he would be down tinkering on the car, so that she couldn't use it.

But on this Saturday there had been an early telephone call, and Gil took it, frowning, appearing perturbed. He shaved himself immediately without speaking, then announced abruptly that he had to go down to the Press club and was taking the cab.

Winifred set about listlessly straightening up the apartment, wondering what they would do to get through this autumn day. On some Saturday afternoons they went out to the Storey place in Maryland.

At noon Gil came in with a stiff, evasive look on his face.

"I'm going out home," he said. "I'm going alone, and I won't be back to lunch."

Her tury flared. "You're going out there and leave me stuck here without any car all day?"

"I have something to talk over with my father," Gil said. "It's important. The buses run if you want to go out."

"I have as much right to go out as you," she fumed. "I stay here alone all week long."

"I'll be back as early as I can," he said at the door.

"What do I care when you come back? I won't be here," she snapped.

Daughter Slow To Start Walking But Quickly Picks Up Her Speed

By HAL BOYLE
NEW YORK (AP)—I mustn't forget to drop into the drug store today.

Have to pick up some bunion pads for the baby. She learned to walk just four days ago, and at the rate she's going now her feet will be worn off clear up to the ankles by the end of the week.

Ever since Tracy Ann, accompanied by three spare diapers, moved into our house at the age of five weeks I have been looking forward to seeing her take her first step.

But she took her own sweet time about it. When she was a year old, she was still what is known as a "creeper." In the old days we called 'em crawlers. She did pull herself upright in her play pen. But after yawning, she sat down again.

I began to get worried. Why didn't she walk? Every parent I ran into seemed to have a baby that walked at 10 months, or 11 months or a year. One guy really drove me crazy. Said he'd heard of a case in which a mother and her baby, two weeks after birth, strolled out of the hospital hand-in-hand together, with the tired mother leaning for support on the shoulder of her sturdy infant.

It was worse when Tracy Ann was 14 months old. Friends began telling of babies they knew—"thoughtful babies"—who hadn't walked until they were two years or older.

I began reading magazine articles to Tracy on the values of walking as an exercise. I brought her home books called "Tramping Through Life" and "The Hiker's Manual."

She took the books seriously, digesting them a page at a time. She got so she preferred the books to her pabulum. But she didn't even regard them as food for thought. Just food.

"Tracy, stand up—no hands," I pleaded. And Tracy, sitting squarely on her small rump, would giggle and hold up both hands—to show she wasn't holding on to anything. But when she did stand up, she grabbed at the nearest support like a guy going down for the third time. She could climb like a squirrel, but she wouldn't stand up by herself.

For some reason her heartless mother seemed completely unconcerned.

"Why don't you let the baby alone?" said Frances. "She'll be walking when she goes to school."

"I should hope so," I told her. "After all, nobody took me to kindergarten piggy back. I wheeled there the first day on roller skates."

"Well, bully for you," murmured Frances. "Brave lad."

Miracles come into our lives in commonplace ways. The other day, shortly before Tracy's 15-month birthday, we were visiting friends, Peggy and John McKee.

Peggy put Tracy on her feet, and took away her hands. Tracy stood there a moment thoughtfully, took a hesitant step . . . then another . . . then another.

"Here, honey," I said, holding out my arms. But Tracy, like a wound up toy, made a mechanical left turn and moved away by herself . . . step . . . step . . . step then kerplunk!—down she went. Put back on her feet, she went 25 steps before kerplunking again. But she walked away from all the outstretched arms—she was going it alone! She wanted no more help.

Somehow it was as if I heard a bugle blowing in my heart. I felt like shooting off fireworks, and I wanted to cry, too. Everybody was excited but Tracy. She couldn't understand why everybody made such a sudden fuss over her.

"She knew she could walk whenever she wanted to," said Frances.

Ever since then Tracy has been tramp-tramp-tramping endlessly.

She worries me even more now that she has learned to walk. I get up at night and go in to her crib to see if she's walking in her sleep.

"Take it easy, Tracy," I tell her. "Lie down and rest. If you live to be 75, that means you'll be wearing shoes for nearly 74 years. Sit down now and take the weight off your feet while you have the chance."

"All men are crazy," says Frances. "They never know what they really want from a girl."

Guess I'd better buy some corn pads, too. Be awful if the neighbors found out I had a 15-month-old daughter with corns.

Chicago Bans Games At Night

In recent years athletic contests at night have been marked by rioting between followers of the teams, vandalism on public transportation cars and other instances of hoodlumism. Willis ordered that high school teams play only on Friday or Saturday afternoons.

County Agent Reminds Farmers Wheat Seeding Time Just Ahead

Wheat seeding time will soon be here, Pickaway County Agent Larry Best reminds farmers. He said none should be seeded previous to Oct. 2, and all wheat and other fall sown grain should be treated with Ceresan M or one of the other Mercury Compounds to prevent stinking smut and seedling rots and blights.

The wheat acreage allotments will cause several replacement crops to be used on most Pickaway County farms, Best said. He offered other suggestions and advice as follows:

The winter grain crops that can possibly be used as replacements are: Winter Barley, Winter Oats, Rye and Spelt. Spelt is an uncommon grain in this area and there is no established market for it. It is equal to spring oats in feeding value and is a good companion crop for legumes and grasses. It should not be seeded on wet land and varies in winter hardiness.

Seed 8 to 10 pecks per acre and use 300 to 400 pounds of a complete fertilizer per acre. Seeding time: Sept. 20 to Oct. 10.

RYE CAN BE seeded especially where fall and spring pasture is needed. It is a poor feed grain. Rye is winter hardy, can be seeded most anytime in the late summer and fall. Balbo and Rosen are the preferred varieties. If rye is to be used for pasture, the Balbo variety should be used. Seed 6 to 8 pecks per acre and use 400 to 500 pounds of a complete fertilizer per acre. Rye is not a good companion crop for meadow seedings.

Winter oats are definitely a poor substitute for wheat in this part of Ohio.

Winter Barley appears to be one of the best winter grain substitutes for wheat in this area. Barley is less winter hardy, lodges more readily and is not as good a companion crop for meadow seedings as wheat.

Winter barley should be seeded from Sept. 15 to Oct. 1 in order that it can make some growth before freezing weather. Seed 8

Martha Raye Asks Damages For Blow

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—Martha Raye, television and night club entertainer, wants $400,000 for injuries she says she suffered during a birthday party brawl a month ago.

Miss Raye filed suit in circuit court against Harry Barton, Coral Gables contractor, claiming permanent injuries she said were caused when Barton smashed a whisky bottle on her head.

She said she will never recover from the effects and that Barton also "used vile and profane language and maliciously assaulted her" and claims the incident caused her to have "blurring eyesight and insomnia."

Ceremonies Set

CLEVELAND (AP)—Some 1,800 persons will become American citizens in a mass naturalization ceremony Nov. 11 in the Public Music Hall. In similar mass swearings throughout the nation, more than 50,000 immigrants will become citizens.

Sokolosky's These Days

If trade were the only consideration for the total change in British policy, it would be possible to develop considerable bitterness over the ingratitude and immorality of a nation of shopkeepers. The addition factor of the atom and hydrogen bombs and the other unconventional weapons which have been let loose upon mankind raises other issues than ingratitude.

Dead nations, like dead men, are not problems in morals; they are merely records in the sands of time. And a nation that can be bombed to extinction has as its first task, survival. It dares not gamble on growth which in an effete era is called colonialism.

What is said of Great Britain is equally true of France and Italy, and while in this country we organize Civil Defense to meet the prospect, the more realistic French suspect that if the Russians do not bomb them, the Americans will. As a matter of fact, Europe's experience in World War II was that the United States bombed first and fastest in time of war and then gave money to repair the physical damage.

It is a serious problem for British, French and Italian statesmen to hold the friendship of the United States while avoiding the ravages of Soviet Russia. The way some of them go about it, they may lose out with both countries, which so often happens to those who are in the middle.

South Hospitality Rather Baffling

CHARLOTTE, N. C. (AP)—Mrs. Margaret Berlow, who recently moved here from Emerson, N.J., told police she wasn't too impressed with the kind of southern hospitality she encountered yesterday.

A youth offered assistance in backing her car from a parking lot.

Pleased, she slid from under the wheel and the youth glided the car back smoothly, and went on his way.

Several blocks later she noticed

Mother Earths Slip Shows A Little, Scientists Say

ROME (AP)—Mother Earth's slip is showing. She's getting just a bit tipsy. And she's slowing down—her day is getting longer than 24 hours.

Just looking out the window, you wouldn't notice any of it. However, scientists in Rome this week for a 42-nation geophysics conference reported that their instruments and calculations have detected all three changes.

Take the one about the day getting longer. It's the slightest change of the three, but in long-run effect on gravity or ocean movements it might prove to be the most important.

Dr. Roger R. Revelle, delegate from the U.S. National Research Council, and Dr. Walter H. Munk of the Scripps Institute of Oceanography, both of La Jolla, Calif., said that for the last 3,000 years

Earth has been turning steadily slower on its axis.

The average slowdown amounts to 3 1/2 seconds per thousand years. That works out pretty small per year, but the two experts reported that the rate of slowdown appears to be steadily increasing. What causes it?

Revelle said the two major factors probably are tidal friction slowing down Earth's turn on its axis, and the torque exerted on the earth by the sun through atmospheric ties. Other possible factors are changes in inertia, changes in the sea level, and transfers of momentum between Earth's mantle and core.

It was on that last point that Revelle and Munk reported the greatest change. They said there is a slip amounting to about 75 feet a year between Earth's outer skin and her inner core.

The other change is the increasing tip in Earth's axis. Revelle and Munk reported that over thousands of years this shift at the pole probably has averaged about a centimeter a year. They said it seems to be increasing. Estimates differed on the present rate. Some put the tilt at the pole in recent times as high as 10 centimeters (four inches) a year.

DOCTOR'S HYPO NEEDLE TAME COMPARED TO ITS ANCESTORS

A silver syringe in use about 1850. First hypodermic syringes did not have needles but elongated nozzles which were inserted in already prepared incisions in patient's limb.

By RICHARD S. BLOCH
Written especially for Central Press and This Newspaper

DO YOU grimace with pain when the doctor gives you an injection with a hypodermic syringe? Think what your fairly recent ancestors had to endure when this development in medicine was young.

Chances are they might have been given injections with blunt needles. In preparation for the "shot" their arm may have been slashed with a knife-like instrument.

One early physician wrote: "I dissolved a grain of morphia in about a half teaspoonful of cold water, then made a puncture with a lancet into the cellular tissue of the left arm . . . I then introduced the syringe as far as I could . . . then pushed the piston home . . ."

Another earlier method involved the use of a cauterized iron which blistered the arm. The medication was then rubbed in.

As these treatments were seldom aseptic, patients may have developed abscesses or even died from the infection.

It wasn't until Louis Pasteur and Robert Koch founded the science of bacteriology that physicians gave heed to the necessity of having sterile instruments.

The famous Englishman, Sir Christopher Wren, appears to have been the first person to use a syringe to insert drugs into the living human body. In 1656 he devised a syringe consisting of a quill fastened to a bladder and used for making injections of opium into the veins of dogs and human beings.

Later scientists also engaged in similar experiments but met with such poor results that interest in the subject waned for 150 years.

Use of the syringe for injecting drugs into the body was revived at the beginning of the Nineteenth Century and gradually gained popularity. In 1860 it was recognized as a common form of medication.

The point on the needle was devised in 1859 by Charles Hunter, a surgeon at the Royal Pimlico dispensary in London, England.

Through the years the development of the hypodermic syringe has taken many forms as is evidenced by the 266 patents for these instruments by the United States Patent Office. Dr. Ephraim Cutter designed the syringe which received the first such patent in 1873.

South African Segregation Rule Irking Missionaries

PRETORIA, South Africa (AP)—Schoolbells in South Africa are tolling out the last days of church mission schools.

The missionary schools, which have educated black African children for more than a century, are headed for extinction under a new education law centralizing education of all natives under government control.

Church groups, both Protestant and Roman Catholic, have voiced strong protests to the new law. The churchmen are still in the dark as to the full scope of the legislation but insist it will mean inferior education for the natives, the op-over, education subsidies to church groups are being reduced. Up to now these subsidies covered 100 per cent of the teachers' salaries plus an amount equivalent to rent on church-built schools.

The Rev. Spencer Hall, director of Anglican missions in one diocese told an opposition newspaper, the Johannesburg Star, that the decreased subsidy "is a process of slow strangulation." He said it would be impossible for the missionary bodies to furnish more money to make up the difference.

The Catholic Times of South Africa, commenting in an editorial on South Africa's "leanings" toward fascism, asked if the government is more concerned with "state monopoly of education than with increased educational facilities for the bantu (native)?"

The Rev. J. B. Webb, president-elect of the Methodist Church in the Transvaal, told a Synod meeting "It was the intention of the (new) law to make it impossible" to continue operating the mission schools as purely private schools on a greatly reduced subsidy.

Defending the changeover, C. W. Prinsloo of the Native Affairs Department, said that "although the missionary effort in past years is highly appreciated here, at this stage it is beginning to retard education." He added that the changeover "is a logical development in all democratic countries, with the state responsible for education."

Baptist Mission Agencies To Merge

NEW YORK (AP)—Two of America's oldest Baptist mission agencies—the 122-year-old Home Mission Society and the 77-year-old Woman's Home Mission Society—are merging.

Plans call for a single missions agency to eliminate duplication and overlapping of activities and personnel.

The plan must be approved by the American Baptist Convention next May.

The two agencies employ more than 1,000 missionaries in the United States, Alaska, Cuba, Haiti, Puerto Rico, Mexico, Nicaragua and El Salvador.

Farmers Warned On Parakeets

COLUMBUS (AP)—The farmer who brings home a parakeet may be bringing parrot fever to his farm, Dr. Ralph E. Dwork, acting state health department director, warns.

Dr. Dwork told 150 Ohio health commissioners at their annual conference that tests in Texas have shown turkeys and chickens to be susceptible to parrot fever.

The disease could spread among Ohioans through domesticated poultry, he warned. "We would be in a

Weekly Food Review

By The Associated Press

Fresh-killed turkeys, ready-to-cook fryers, boneless chuck roast and hickory-smoked hams are among the best buys available on meat counters this week in food stores across the nation.

Pork prices have climbed again in many areas, along with lamb and veal.

Supplies of frying, broiling, roasting and fricassee chickens are at or near all-time highs, and prices continue to move lower.

Hints of possible government price props have given a potent lift to egg prices recently—and the upward trend was clearly discernible at the retail stage this week.

Turkey is being featured by several nationwide food chains, with both the large (over 16 pounds) and small varieties appearing on "week-end special" lists. But pork, lamb and veal are conspicuously absent.

terrible mess if that should happen in Ohio," Dr. Dwork said.

The acting director said 14 per cent of parakeets examined in Ohio Health Department laboratories were found diseased.

Europe Eyes U. S. Taste For Liquids

More Yankee Dollars Seen Coming From Various Liquors

By SAM DAWSON

NEW YORK (AP)—Europeans hope today to distill more dollars out of America's taste for liquid refreshment—all the way from bubbly water to hard stuff on the rocks.

Sales drives are being fired for French cognac and champagne, German wines and beer, Irish whiskey, and Spanish sherry. And Scotch will go on being a chief dollar earner for Britain, except that this year the distillers aren't increasing the supply for this country. Instead they're trying to recapture other world markets they've neglected since the war in their pursuit of the dollar.

American producers of whiskey, wine, brandies and beer dominate the domestic market. But competition among themselves is getting rougher, and an aftermath of the new European sales push could be increased demands on Congress for a hike in tariffs.

The sales drives will be pushed vigorously. Maurice Hennessy, senior partner of the French cognac firm, J. Hennessy & Co., who is in this country on a sales mission, expects this year to set a sales record here. But he says cognac's sales chart here has been one of great peaks and valleys.

In a way, it's typical of most European beverage sales here. As Hennessy explained in an interview, the doughboys got a taste for cognac during World War I, but came back to an America of prohibition, and took to bathtub gin and white mule whiskey. After repeal, cognac made a little comeback here, but lost that ground when World War II shut off supplies. And, besides, this time GI's learned to drink calvados in Norway.

Since the war the cognac distillers have suffered from France's inflation, which tended to price them out of the world markets. But Hennessy voices a complaint that other European producers echo: That American hotels, restaurants and package stores tend to put so much a mark-up on imported drinks for prestige reasons as to hold down sales volume. He's trying both to drum up new customers here and to get the by-the-drink price brought down to a level competitive with other liquors.

Thirty-five champagne producers of France have joined with the National Assn. of Alcoholic Beverage Importers here in a drive to increase sales. Last year Americans bought 2,235,642 bottles of the French product. The Interprofessional Committee of Champagne Wine, of Epernay, France, says 400,000 bottles of champagne were brought in 3,924,000 Yankee dollars for France. But Americans

REV. DANIEL LINEHAN, Jesuit priest who scouted the shifting location of the magnetic pole in a fishing schooner, declares in Boston that he wants to go back to the Arctic and hopes to see the time when regular excursions will be made to the northern wilderness. Two of the photos he brought back with him show his schooner, the Monte Carlo, locked in Arctic ice; and him and John Shene-man (left) taking magnetic measurements inside the magnetic north pole.

Service Station Seeking Damages

COLUMBUS (AP)—Operators of Athens County filling station have asked the Ohio Supreme Court for an order that would make the state highway director pay damages caused by a road relocation.

The case was filed by Harley and Lenora Merritt who operate a filling station on U. S. 50. The highway department has begun relocating five miles of that road near Guyville in Athens County.

The Merritts say the new road, in bypassing their filling station, will destroy their business. They say Ohio law provides that the highway department pay damages in such cases and that Samuel O. Linzell, state highway director, has refused to do so.

Richard Blum Jr., president of Julius Wile Sons Co., importers, and head of the sales drive here, says one big object will be to increase the buying of champagne for home consumption. And the French could use more American dollars.

The Mohammedan Koran, written in the seventh century, is the most recent of the world's chief sacred books.

MANY FINE LINES OF BEER

World Today

By James Marlow

WASHINGTON (AP) — Divided Germany will be a problem for the West and Russia for years. No wonder both sides are pulling so hard in opposite directions, with no solution in sight.

The United States and Britain have obvious reasons for wanting the West Germans rearm in a hurry and made part of the Western defense against Russia.

The crucial time element makes them look not only to the immediate military benefit but to the uncertain future.

The difference between West Germany rearm and unarmed, facing the Russians, is the difference between a door, locked, and a swinging door.

The Allies would have to defend West Germany against Russian attack anyway, even though the Germans were unarmed. But if they remained unarmed the task might be impossible.

Once the Germans were armed, as the French have made abundantly clear through their expressed worries, the Allies would have the problem of seeing that rearm Germany didn't get out of bounds to become a new terror.

The Allies will meet in London next Tuesday and again in Paris in mid-October to seek the double answer of rearming Germany and keeping her within bounds afterwards.

But time is working, and it may not be working on the side of the Allies. At this moment, under the pro-Ally and anti-Communist leadership of Chancellor Adenauer, the West Germans want to get into the Western defense alliance.

But Adenauer will not always be there, and whether he is or not, the mood of the West Germans may change if the Allies, through their indecision, keep them dangling indefinitely between heaven and earth.

They are dangling now and have been since the war. The Allies have not given them the right to rearm nor permitted them independence. American, British, and French troops occupy the country. The three powers keep a veto over Adenauer's government.

But the Germans have made an astonishing recovery from the war and are growing in strength. They can't be expected to remain in a second-rate position forever.

It was thought that under the European Defense Community, calling for a single army, the Germans couldn't menace their neighbors again since they would be serving with troops of other nations under a unified command.

For various reasons the French killed EDC. There was a wide gap in the hope that EDC could positively prevent revival of a German national army.

Adenauer's West German government could agree to submerging its armed forces in a single European Army. But the time might come when Russia would release its hold on East Germany and let it be united with the Western half.

If then a new, all German government was created, would it abide, or feel obliged to abide, by the agreement made by the old West German government? Or would it withdraw and set up its own, new national army?

The Allies face that problem in any plan they work out for rearming West Germany now. But bringing it into the Western Alliance now would give them some hope for believing a new German government would stay in.

The Russians have been doing their best to persuade the West Germans they would lose all hope for a reunified Germany if they join up with the West. The Germans are in the middle of this power-pull. If the West Germans turn neutralist, in the hope of getting Russia to yield up East Germany, and if Russia ever does, then:

The united Germany could dictate the future of Europe, and perhaps the world, by making an alliance with the West or Russia.

10th Robber Nabbed In 11th Raid On Tavern

FREDERICK, Md. (AP)—Wilcom's Inn, which has been so mysteriously tempting to would-be robbers over recent years, has been invaded for the 11th time.

And once again, owner Charles F. Wilcom and his three sons, who get plenty of practice at the game of catching crooks, made a capture.

Wilcom told police yesterday he and his boys caught one man coming out of the establishment early Monday, but that two others got away with 20 cartons of cigarettes, some change and three antique muskets Wilcom valued at $325.

Before Monday's exploit, the family trapped three men inside the inn and nabbed all three, wounding one seriously with shot-gun pellets. And before that they apprehended six burglars in two catches. One of them was wounded and died later while awaiting trial.

Turned over to police after this week's attempt was a man identified as Frederick Doy Fields of Portsmouth, Ohio.

Chief 'Designer' Misses TV Show

CINCINNATI (AP)—Television viewers in Southwestern Ohio watched a baby born by a caesarian operation here last night but the father missed most of it.

Shortly before the operation went on the air over station WLW-TV, the father had to take his mother-in-law home because she was ill. He was reported to have seen a bit of telecast at his mother-in-law's home but by the time he got back to the hospital the baby girl had been born.

Both the mother and daughter were reported in good condition. The parents asked that they remain anonymous for the program.

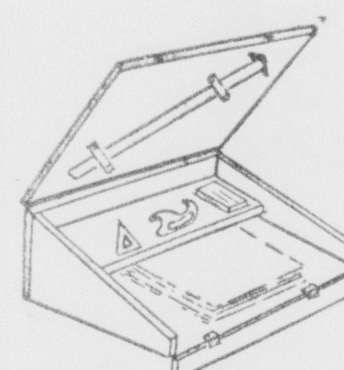

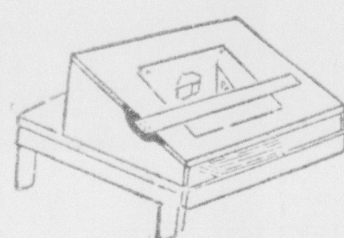

EUB Bishop, 80, Dies In Dayton

DAYTON (AP)—Dr. Grant David Batdorf, 80, bishop emeritus of the Evangelical United Brethren Church for the United States, died

HERE'S HOW . . .

When the home craftsman starts to make his own plans for woodworking projects, he will need a few items of drafting equipment: T-square, triangles, protractor, curves, compass, paper and pencils. His problem of keeping his materials together, ready to use, is solved with a simple drafting case.

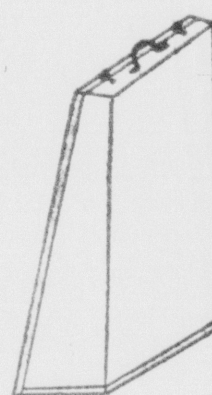

No dimensions are shown on the illustrative drawings because the size of the drafting board will be the controlling element. The case is made of 1-inch lumber, the slanted sides being about 6 inches high at one end and about 3 inches at the other. The inside shelf is attached with angle fasteners. The 3-inch box end is hinged to drop below the paper tray when the case is opened. The drafting board is hinged to the 6-inch end. Screen hooks keep the lid closed for carrying. A suit-case handle provides a grip. Strips of elastic cloth on the underside of the drafting board hold the T-square in place. Other strips, tacked to the shelf, will anchor the equipment.

here Tuesday night. He had been ill two days.

Dr. Batdorf, a native of Lebanon County, Pa., had served as bishop of the church's eastern district from 1929 to 1945.

He is survived by a daughter,

Mrs. Agnes L. Ripsch of Dayton, and a son, Hillis Gordon of Lane, Pa. Services will be held here Saturday at 2 p. m.

'Ducky' Corn Shot In Tavern Brawl

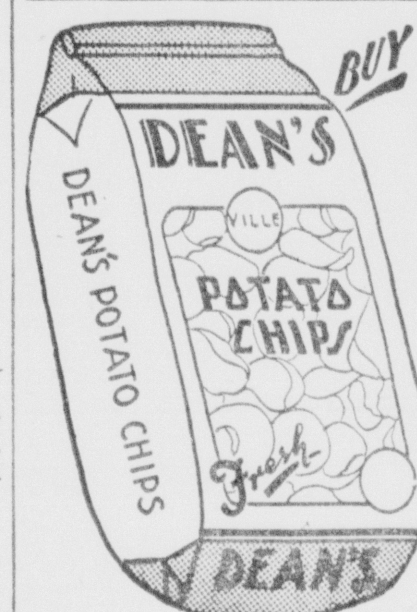

IRONTON (AP)—D. E. (Ducky) Corn, owner of the Latin Quarter night club, was shot but not seriously wounded Tuesday night in a minor brawl.

William Coburn, 31, Coal Grove architect, was named in a warrant obtained by Corn and issued by Lawrence County officers on a charge of shooting with intent to kill.

Coburn was arrested by Ashland police at the Kentucky end of the Ashland-Coal Grove bridge. He is in the Ashland city jail, where police quote him as saying he will resist extradition to Ohio.

Fourth-Place Teams Battle For Series Cut

First Division Spot To Be Worth About $750 Per Player

By The Associated Press
On the theory that $750 is still $750, four teams today retained a vital interest in the makeup of the final major league standings.

The $750 represents the approximate share per player of the World Series money for members of the fourth-place teams in each league. And fourth place still is quite a battle in both leagues.

In the National only a game separates Cincinnati, now in fourth from the fifth-place Philadelphia Phillies. Boston leads Detroit by a game and a half in the American League.

The Redlegs have just two games left and the Phillies have six to play.

Cincinnati still is screaming about a 3-1 loss in Milwaukee yesterday when a ninth inning rally was brought to an abrupt end by a freak double play.

With runners on first and second and one out, pinch-hitter Bob Borkowski struck out on a wild pitch. While catcher Del Crandall chased the ball, Gus Bell dashed from second to third and Borkowski headed for first in a hurry since if the catcher drops a third strike he usually has to throw out the batter at first.

Crandall threw to third baseman Eddie Mathews in a vain attempt to catch Bell and Mathews fired across the diamond when he saw Borkowski racing for first. His throw hit Borkowski in the back and into right field and Bell scored from third.

Then the umpires took over. After an 18-minute conference they ruled Borkowski was out automatically on his strikeout since first base had been occupied. Then they ruled Borkowski had interfered with the attempt to catch Bell, because he drew a throw to first. The rules say in this case the other runner, Bell, is out. The two outs ended the game and the Reds filed a formal protest.

There was no room for protests at Philadelphia where the Phils walloped Pittsburgh twice, 12-1 and 5-1. Robin Roberts won his 22nd game, a four-hitter, in the nightcap.

Detroit beat Baltimore 4-1 on Steve Gromek's four-hitter and Boston wasn't scheduled.

In other action the American League champion Cleveland Indians equalled a 27-year-old record for the most games won by beating Chicago 3-1 for their 110th victory. The National League champion New York Giants bowed 3-0 to rookie Karl Spooner of the Brooklyn Dodgers, who set a major league record by striking out 13 in his first start in the Big Time.

The New York Yankees defeated Washington 3-0 with Tommy Byrne winning his third game as the Yanks came up with a triple play, fifth in the majors this season.

Brooks Lawrence won his 14th game for the St. Louis Cardinals, checking the Chicago Cubs 6-3 on five hits. Two of the three Cubans came on a fifth-inning homer by pitcher Dave Cole.

Don Mossi, a rookie used mostly in relief and Al Smith combined their talents in the Cleveland victory. Mossi shut out the White Sox through the first eight innings and Smith drove in two of the three Indian runs with a double in the second inning and a triple in the fourth.

Spooner, just up from Fort Worth of the Texas League, held the Giants to three singles, only one of them a hard hit ball. He fanned six in a row at one point and broke Cliff Melton's old rookie strikeout record of 13.

Local Harness Race Driver Hurt During Meet At Lebanon

A Circleville harness race driver was one of two drivers injured in a pileup during the running of the third race at Lebanon Raceway.

Porter Martin, driving R. Swank's Pilot Chief, got involved in the incident in which three sulkeys upset. Martin suffered a shoulder injury.

The well known local driver piloted the same pacer to two second places at the Pickaway County Fair's night racing program. He gained place position in both heats of the 24 Pace on Sept. 17 behind

Hi-Lo-Neda. Milt Harris, of Frankfort, Ind., driving Afton Jane Abbie in the Lebanon race, suffered severe face and head cuts, according to reports.

The third driver, Clayton Cox, of Wilmington, was not injured. He was driving Edgewood Stone.

The race, for Class 24 pacers, was won by Willard Mikesell driving Spartan Bea.

Mikesell, who hails from Eaton, also won both heats of the featured three-year-old trot behind Ladys First. Ladys First turned the first heat in the slow time of 2:16 and paid $2.40 and 2.40. In the second heat the time was 2:08 and the mutual payoff was $2.40 and $2.20.

There was no show betting because of the small field.

A crowd of 2,101 wagered $52,720 at the mutual windows.

6-Man Football Tickets To Sell At School, Gate

Tickets for county league six-man football doubleheaders will be sold at the schools and the gate.

If the tickets are purchased at the schools, the price is 25 cents. If the tickets are bought at the Fairgrounds gate, the price will be 50 cents, regardless of whether it is a student or adult.

Friday night's twin bill will get under way at 7:30 p. m. when Ashville meets Walnut. The second game, between Jackson and Deer Creek, will start at approximately 9 p. m.

The grandstand, which has been located outside the track, has been moved to the infield so that fans sitting in those stands will have a perfect view of the game.

THE REMAINDER of the county league schedule will be played on Saturday nights after this week.

On Oct. 9, an experiment will be tried when three officials will be used, instead of two.

Friday night, a mobile public address system will be in use with an announcer describing the play. The unit, being brought by John Hardin of Ashville, belongs to that community's booster club.

In Memoriam

In loving memory of Wesley A. Hill who left us on September 23, 1953. While he has been gone since one year ago today.

And yet we seem to see him here today. He seems so far away. Who is that one time was so near. No map of ours, on the old road. His journeying was trace.

We only feel he's reached his home. And may have found the glad soul back. To reach the resting clay? Or who would wish that he might share Our tomorrow's toil and strife. Who, loosed from Death and all its pains.

Has entered into Life.

Increased Entries Spur Interest For Chicago Dairy Show

Pickaway County farmers can obtain experienced advice and up-to-date literature on their farming problems at the County Extension Office located in the Post Office Building, S. Court St., Circleville. The office here, headed by County Agent Larry Best, is the link between district farmers and the College of Agriculture, Ohio State University.

Entries of the continent's top purebred dairy cattle indicate an increased showing of all breeds at the 2nd International Dairy Show, to be held in the International Amphitheatre at the Chicago Stock Yards, Oct. 9-16, officials of the show report.

Owners of prize winning cattle from the Atlantic and Pacific coasts and Canada will exhibit their best animals in competition for $6,500 in cash prizes that are offered in the competitions for the six breeds that produce the nation's milk — Ayrshires, Brown Swisses, Guernseys, Holsteins, Jerseys, and Milking Shorthorns.

The International Dairy Show immediately following the National Dairy Cattle Congress in Waterloo, Iowa, will center attention of the nation's dairymen in the Midwest where these two national events will take place in consecutive weeks. It is under the same management as the 54-year old International Livestock Exposition world famed annual show of the meat-making breeds of farm animals.

A special train will transport the cattle directly from the Iowa show to the International Amphitheatre in Chicago where they will meet in competition many Eastern and Canadian cattle.

The opening day kickoff of the show, Oct. 9, will feature a dairy parade down Chicago's famous State Street. The parade will salute the nation's dairy farmers and will include floats of the dairy breeds, mechanical and educational displays, dairy queens, and bands.

The dairy parade down Chicago's busiest thoroughfare will mark the 83rd anniversary, to the day, of the great Chicago fire allegedly started by Mrs. O'Leary's cow kicking over a lamp on Chicago's near west side, Oct. 9, 1871.

Hundreds of 4-H and FFA members expect to be on hand with their animals for the Junior Dairy Show on Monday, Oct. 11. Numerous trophies and a large cash prize list are offered for youngster exhibitors at the Chicago show.

Three judging contests will test the skill of many young people throughout the nation — the 4-H

Dairy Cattle Judging Contest, the Collegiate Dairy Cattle Judging Contest, and the Collegiate Dairy Products Judging Contest. A majority of the states will be represented by teams in one or more of these events, the show management reports.

There will be numerous industrial and educational exhibits in conjunction with the cattle displays that will emphasize and dramatize the nutritional and health values of milk products.

Eleven FFA members from Ohio, including one from Amanda, will be recommended to receive the organization's highest degree, that of American Farmer, at the 27th national convention of the Future Farmers of America in Kansas City, Oct. 11-14.

Warren Weiler, state supervisor of agricultural education, has received information from national FFA headquarters in Washington stating that governing boards of the national organization have reviewed the Ohio applications and will recommend that the eleven Ohioans receive the coveted degree. Approval by these boards is tantamount to election by the delegates.

Dr. Clyde Jissong, state director of education said that attainment of the American Farmer degree is based on the Future Farmer's record in farming, leadership and scholarship. The degree is limited to FFA members who have been out of high school at least one year and those showing evidence of becoming successfully established in farming.

Each degree winner will receive a certificate and gold key from the FFA organization, and a $50 check from the Future Farmers of America Foundation.

The eleven Ohioans include Stephen Andrew Silbaugh of Amanda Route 1.

Director L. L. Rummell has announced the forming of a new department of dairy technology at the Ohio Agricultural Experiment Station in Wooster. The action came after approval by the Station's board of control.

Dr. Ira A. Gould, chairman of the newly created department, will be assisted in research work by L. H. Burgwald, W. L. Slatter and J. W. Harper.

Prior to the board's action, research in dairy technology was carried on in the department of dairy science at Ohio State University, Columbus. The work will continue at the university with separate departmental status.

Director Rummell emphasized the importance of his type of research in Ohio by citing the scope of dollar value in dairy products manufacturing. Buckeye dairy farms produce nearly $300 million worth of milk annually. Processing and distribution of milk and dairy products will almost equal that amount.

In the United States as a whole, the milk industry's multi-billion dollar annual output represents twice the mill value of the nation's steel production, and exceeds the wholesale value of all automobiles.

The director also announced renewed approval of a USDA cooperative project on research with Italian cheese under direction of Dr. Harper. The proposed $30,000 grant for a three year period will enable the dairy technology department to perform vital work with this important dairy product. Ohio makes annually 2.5 million of the nation's 60 million pounds of this type of cheese.
